This free resource introduces ‘targets of bullying’.

What is Bullying?

Ask the group for their definitions of bullying and then write up the following on a whiteboard or flipchart:

‘Bullying is a regular form of deliberate behaviour that causes the target physical or emotional distress and can be carried out by an individual or a group over a period of time.’

Targets of Bullying

Is there such a thing as a typical target for bullying?

It may be true that some people are easier targets for bullies for a number of reasons:

- They have a physical disability or learning difficulty
- They may be quiet or studious
- Their race/religion/culture
- They have a health condition
- Issues of a sexual or sexist nature
- LGBT prejudices
- No apparent reason at all — the bully just happens to have singled them out

Questions to Ask Students

1. Can you think of anything else that would make a person a target for bullying?
2. Have you been bullied or have you bullied others?
3. Why would a person bully another person?
4. What do you think a target of bullying feels after he/she has been bullied?
5. How do you think the bully feels after he/she has bullied someone?
